Submission of Memorandums

Individuals and organizations wishing to do so may submit memorandums to the commission. Authors of such memorandums will be invited to give a short oral presentation during the hearing. However, at the author's discretion, memorandums may be submitted without an oral presentation.

A memorandum is a document that serves to express opinions or concerns pertaining to a particular issue, and to develop and clarify arguments to support them.

A memorandum usually contains the following:

- The project's title;
- A short introduction of the individual or group presenting the memorandum;
- A brief explanation of the proponent's interest in the project;
- Opinions on the project as a whole;
- Concerns pertaining to the project;
- Suggestions and comments that might serve to enhance the project.

Memorandums are made public at the time of the second part of the consultation, and are posted on the OCPM's Web site.

A memorandum must include the name of the person and, where applicable, the organization, submitting it.

To prevent dissemination of personal or confidential information (such as postal and e-mail addresses and telephone numbers), any individual or organization submitting a memorandum should place such information on a separate sheet appended to the document. If the memorandum includes any copyrighted texts, such as newspaper or magazine articles, permission for their reproduction should also be enclosed.

No memorandum difficult to reproduce or containing personal information or copyrighted documents not accompanied by permission for their reproduction may be posted on the OPCM Web site. All memorandums will, however, be considered by commission members. These provisions apply to both printed and electronic documents.

Memorandums must be written in a manner respectful of other participants, and may not contain passages that could damage an individual's reputation, honour or dignity.

We recommend that lengthy memorandums be accompanied by an executive abstract of no more than one page.
